

Thoughts in words

A poem lets somebody else read your thoughts. If your thoughts are dull and boring nobody will want to read them. You have to make them alive and 'colourful'.

Instead of thinking in words, think in pictures. Now put the picture into words.

Choose one of the ideas here, get some pictures in your head, and off you go!

Shopping with dad

Breaking up for the holidays

Watching your team score the winning goal

Birthday party

Swinging on a rope tied to a tree

Splashing in puddles

EXTRA!

Instead of looking at the picture in your head, look at the picture your words make, and draw or paint it. If your picture doesn't match the one in your head, change the words!
