

Celebrity Wedding

Lenny Loudwater, the footballer, is marrying Gracie Gumble, who's a chat show hostess. They want the wedding to be perfect so they have got a wedding planner, Shaun Shakeup, to help them. Here are some of their plans ... add in the semi-colons.

Semi-colons are useful for linking two phrases where the information is similar. It is like taking a short pause which is not as strong as a full stop and yet not as weak as a comma. For example: Dennis was very good at hockey; he's bought some new shin pads.

I don't want the ceremony to be in a church an open air setting would be prettier.

Lenny doesn't want it to be too formal some people want to wear jeans.

I'd like the cake to be in the shape of a football there could be some small sofas around it.

I'm keen to avoid wearing a white dress white always makes me look so drained!

We want an evening meal it will be a nice way to extend the day.

I thought we could look at colour palettes colour will be an important part of your day.

Challenge

Make up some comments of your own; use a semi-colon to separate your clauses. Don't forget to write the name of the person under the comment. The first has been done for you.

You might want to re-think wearing jeans; Chatkins Magazine will be there after all!
